Province should hear P3 concerns: EPSB trustee

Edmonton Public School Board. New schools built under the private-public partnership model or P3 have been crucial for the growing population

Problems faced when building schools through a privatepublic partnership need to be brought to the province's attention, said an Edmonton public school trustee.

In a report presented to the Edmonton Public School Board trustees Tuesday, planning staff revealed they had encountered challenges in the P3 process early on, including dealing with third-party maintenance providers.

Staff also identified problems clarifying the roles of staff from EPSB, Alberta Infrastructure and the third-party builder.

Trustee Ken Gibson said these were concerns that needed to be shared with the province.

"I would suggest the experience captured in the information report be shared with Infrastructure Alberta so if the government at some point returns to the P3 model, we can help them improve it to better meet our needs," he said.

The information report comes just days after the province announced it would be ditching the P3 plan for 19 planned new schools.

Education minister Jeff Johnson said while the province wont be using P3s this time around, they've been extremely successful in the past.

"By doing P3s over the last several rounds it's meant we've been able to do in the neighbourhood of 20 more schools with the same amount of money," he told Metro.

"There are benefits when done in the right situation."

EPSB's Ken Erickson said while the district identified some challenges with the P3 model, the process has overall been a success.

"We've had a few challenges like any new relationship, but generally speaking, the P3s are working quite well for us."

Erickson said the need for the nine schools built under the P3 model in the district have been crucial for the growing population.

We got them and we needed them badly in those new areas. If we had to wait an extra year or two, that would have made it a lot harder for our stu-

Consultation

Trustees push on with closure plan for three schools

Three Edmonton schools are one step closer to being closed and replaced by a brand new kindergarten-to-Grade 9 school, now that the city's public school board has approved a new consultation process.

At Tuesday's Edmonton Public School Board meeting, Supt. Darrel Robertson presented the plan to close Rundle Elementary, R.J. Scott Elementary and Lawton Junior High, then build an $18.84-million school in Rundle Heights.

The Rundle community has embraced this project; they're very excited,' said Robertson. "They didn't want a modernization, they wanted a new school, and that's what we're giving them."

After the province announced funding for the project in January, the board launched what Robertson called an "extensive consultation" to gauge the interest of three different communities.

In June, EPSB announced the Lawton community had clearly wanted the new facility.

"The community really views the possible replacement school as an investment in our students and our community and a recognition that we need to provide great learning spaces not only next year and the year after, but 30, 40 years down the road," Robertson said.

The board also approved drafting a letter to the province in hopes of achieving a September 2016 open date.

Molson site redevelopment begins

The controversial redevelopment of the former Molson Brewery site will break ground Wednesday, with the developer hoping to win people over as it's built out.

Ralph Huzinga with First Capital Reality said the new LEED silver development will bring a lot to the city.

'Once it's built it will be appreciated more than it is on a site plan," he said.

Huzinga said that, since the approval, more of the parking has been moved underground and the building designs have been tweaked.

He said he believes most of the resistance was from the Oliver Community League board.

"The resistance we experienced, I'm not convinced was necessarily indicative of the broader Oliver community," he

Jarrett Campbell, president of the Oliver Community

League, said the development is still wrong for the area.

"Fundamentally, it's same development and we have the same concerns we have always had," he said.

Campbell hopes denser, more pedestrian-oriented development is the future.

We should take the Molson development and see it as a missed opportunity, but also a learning opportunity," he said.

Highrise developments will still soar along the north edge of downtown, but councillors have taken a step toward keeping one property in the area closer to the ground.

City administration had proposed new zoning for dozens of properties along 105th Avenue that would have nixed a requirement that commercial properties — such as stores or restaurants — come as part of residential towers.

The change was particularly important to one landowner hoping to develop a standalone restaurant near 105th Street and 106th Avenue. Council was against the broader change but asked administration to come back with zoning changes for just that one property.

Members from the community argued the zoning was part of a plan for the area that they had spent a lot of time developing with the city.

"We bought into it and we worked hard on it," said Derrick Forsythe with the Queen Mary Park Community League.

Forsythe told councillors he was concerned the dominoes would fall, even if they approved a change for just one property.

Coun. Scott McKeen said he couldn't support changing the overall vision but didn't think one restaurant would be the

Group plots to plant Edmonton's first food forest

Local edibles. City working to naturalize different parts of River Valley

LEAH GERMAIN

River Valley users could soon find themselves snacking on locally grown berries and fruit as a group of Edmonton gardeners plot to plant the city's first food forest.

Leading the charge, Edmonton high school teacher and master gardener Dustin Bajer said a food forest not only provides locally-sourced edibles, but offers the city a chance to increase its tree count as it works to naturalize different areas.

"A forest doesn't require any weeding, tilling, fertilizing, watering, insecticides or chemicals," said Bajer. "If a forest burns down it will replenish itself.

"The idea behind a food forest is to mimic those patterns in such a way that you can have the resiliency of a natural system but you can tweak it in such a way you can produce food."

Currently, the city is working to cut back on the amount of mowing it does, while planting trees and shrubs native to the province in an effort to naturalize certain areas.

According to Bajer, the food forest accomplishes all of those goals.

As a result, he plans on planting native plants, including Saskatoons, high bush cranberries, currants, gooseberries and pin cherries.

"It's turning a piece of land that was previously mowed continuously back into a river valley forest," he added.

Bajer said there's huge potential to add more food forests throughout the city.

"There's no shortage of places to do this," Bajer said.

Cycling

Bike-riding skills prevent collisions: Advocates

Cycling advocates are reminding bikers to be aware of the rules of the road after a 15-year-old girl was struck by a car in Sherwood Park Monday.

The girl is still in hospital Tuesday afternoon with serious but non-life threatening injuries to her head and legs, said RCMP.

The girl was not wearing a helmet at the time of the collision, according to police, something cycling specialists say is mandatory for anyone under 18.

"We focus on teaching people riding skills. A helmet isn't designed to prevent collisions," said Christopher Chan, executive director of Edmonton Bicycle Commuters Society.

Witnesses say the young biker crossed the Granada Boulevard and Cloverbar Road intersection when the traffic light was red and was struck by a minivan driving through a green light.

Strathcona RCMP say cyclists who choose to ride on the road need to follow the same rules of the road as motor vehicle drivers.

Heritage Savings Trust. Fund earned $2.1B in 2013-14; sits at $17.5B

The Alberta government says its nest egg earned $2.1 billion in the last fiscal year — a 16 per cent rate of return.

The value of the Heritage Savings Trust Fund now sits at $17.5 billion.

"The Heritage Fund's strong growth confirms what we have been telling Albertans for some time now — that we can grow our short-term and long-term savings and keep our balance sheet strong at the same time," said Finance Minister Doug Horner, president of Treasury Board.

Most of the money earned is being moved into general revenue to pay for government programs.

Just under $200 million is being kept in the fund, as required by law, to protect against inflation.

The heritage fund was set up under former premier Peter Lougheed as a long-term savings account generated by Alberta's oil wealth.

Initially, the government deposited 30 per cent of non-renewable resource revenues into the fund.

Those deposits stopped during hard times in the 1980s, but began again in 2005.

According to the Heritage Fund's 2013-14 Annual Report, the fund's average annual investment return over the past five years was 12.7 per cent. The 10-year average annual return is 7.5 per cent.

Riding and writing.

Anthology aims to express joys of cycling via the written word

STEPHANIE DUBOIS

If you ride on two wheels, organizers of a new bike anthology want to hear from you on June 29.

As the second book in the series, Be-Spoked will be made up of local cyclists' accounts of riding their bike in Edmonton or around the world.

"We're inviting bike enthusiasts to explore the loyalty that cyclists bestow on bike through the medium of the written word," said Grace Emmanuel, owner of Stylus Fine Pens and co-collaborator of the project.

Cyclists are asked to submit either a short story, essay or poetry that explain to the reader the joys of riding a bike.

With June being Bike Month, project organizers are working under the theme of "spoke," which is both an integral component of a bike wheel and the past tense of speak.

Next year's budget for Edmonton Public Schools was approved Tuesday, marking the district's highest budget to date at $1 billion.

High Level Bridge set for Canada Day lightup

Big switch.Controlling lights a complex operation

Testing of the lights on the High Level Bridge is going well and the people behind the project believe they will be ready to switch it on for good next week.

Derek Pogany, with Proloux Lighting, said the team has been working on the program that will run the lights, which are almost ready to go. He said when the lights go on, the hope is that everything will be timed with the music.

"Hopefully the timing works perfectly and the highs (in the music) react with the lighting and the lows work well with the lighting," he said.

Pogany said the bridge control system is massive and allows a wide variety of colours and patterns.

"There are 15,000 channels that are controlling this project," he said. "That's quite a powerful system."

Pogany said the opening sequence the team is working on is going to paint the bridge with light but will avoid being too glitzy. It will be up to the city how the bridge is used long-term.

Dave Hoeksema, with EPCOR, said ongoing testing citizens may have seen showed the bridge lighting at its full potential, not necessarily how it will be used when it turns on.

"We have run it through very complex testing patterns, so we have tried to do as much as it possibly could do," he said.

From left, Blake McGrath with Summit Swing Stage, who installed the lights, Dave Hoeksema with EPCOR, who oversaw the project, and Derek Pogany with Proloux Lighting, who is programming the lights, stand with samples of the lights that have been installed on the High Level Bridge. "I didn't know what 'cut her' meant," said Schenck, now 83. She soon found out: Schenck said she was given a spinal tap and then sterilized against her will, along with 7,600 others from 1929 to 1974 under the state's eugenics program.

Eugenics programs in the U.S. were widely perceived as a legitimate effort to improve society by sterilizing people the state deemed inferior citizens incapable of caring for children. Victims were disproportionately poor, mentally disabled or African-American. Eugenics fell out of favour in when it became associated with Nazi dictator Adolf Hitler's ideas of racial purity during the Second World War.

Of 33 states that ran forced sterilization programs, North Carolina is the first to compensate victims. But getting victims to come forward can be difficult. Only one woman attended a legal clinic recently held by the University of North Carolina Center for Civil Rights to guide people through the claims process.

Others have died awaiting compensation, and their families will not qualify for payments if they died before June 2013. Victims will be paid June 30, 2015, one year after the claims deadline. The $10 million will be divided according to the number of victims file claims approved. At the current rate, the average payment will be less than $20,000 per person.

Mistaken diagnosis. Face reconstruction a success for Kazakhstani woman

A medical team has painstakingly repaired the disfiguring injuries to a woman's face, caused by radiation treatments for a cancer she never had that caused a gaping hole in her cheek and made her an outcast in a former Soviet republic.

Lessya Kotelevskaya was recovering Tuesday after a 16hour surgery the day before at University of Louisville Hospital. Her surgeon, Dr. Jarrod Little, said the procedure to reconstruct her jawbone and cheek went according to plan.

The 30-year-old was diagnosed with terminal jaw cancer at age 19 in Kazakhstan after she was elbowed in the face at a basketball game and her jaw became swollen. The damage from radiation treatments made it difficult to eat and talk. By the time she found out the diagnosis was wrong, she had lost her husband and their clothing boutique.

The surgery included removing a leg bone that was conformed into a new jawbone, with the skin becoming the new inside covering of her mouth. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Boko Haram attacks villages, abducts 91 people: Witnesses

Kummabza, Nigeria.

Kidnappings come less than three months after 200 schoolgirls were taken in mass abduction

Extremists have abducted 91 more people, including tod-dlers as young as three, in weekend attacks on villages in Nigeria, witnesses said Tuesday, providing fresh evidence of the military's failure to curb an Islamic uprising and the government's inability to provide security.

The kidnappings come less than three months after the mass abduction of more than 200 schoolgirls, which embarrassed Nigeria's government and military because of their slow response. Those girls are still being held captive.

The most recent victims include 60 girls and women, some of whom are married,

A local official confirmed the abductions, but security forces denied them.

There was no way to safely and independently confirm the report from Kummabza, 150 kilometres from Maiduguri, capital of Borno state and headquarters of a military state of emergency that has failed to curtail near-daily attacks by Boko Haram fighters. Vigilante leader Aji Khalil said Tuesday the abductions took place Saturday in an attack that killed four villagers. Khalil lives in Maiduguri but gets reports daily from other vigilante groups that have had some success in repelling Boko Haram with primitive weapons.

A senior councillor from the village's Damboa local government told The Associated Press that abductions had occurred but spoke on condition of anonymity because he was not authorized to give information to reporters. He said the reports came from elderly survivors of the attack who had walked some 25 kilometres to the relative safety of other villages.

An intelligence officer with Nigeria's Department of State Security also said there had been a mass abduction, but he said it occurred in Kummabza and three nearby villages between June 13 and 15, and that no one knows the actual number abducted. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

KFC. Probe doesn't find evidence worker asked scarred child to leave

Fried-chicken chain KFC said two different investigations have not found any evidence that an employee asked a three-year-old girl and family members to leave because her severe facial injuries, suffered in a pit bull mauling, disturbed customers.

KFC spokesman Rick Maynard said Tuesday the company considered the matter closed after an internal investigation by the franchise restaurant in Jackson and an independent probe. Maynard said the company would honour its commitment to donate $30,000 to help with medical bills for Victoria Wilcher.

"Like the rest of America, the KFC family has been moved by the story of Victoria's injuries and recovery," Maynard said.

Allegations that Victoria was asked to leave the restaurant were made earlier this month on the Facebook site Victoria's Victories, which follows her recovery from the April attack.

In a statement, Hannon Food Services, which operates the restaurant, said the company was deeply troubled by the allegation. As part of its investigation, Hannon said it

President won't interfere in verdicts against three journalists

Egyptian President Abdel-Fattah el-Sissi on Tuesday rejected calls from the United States and other Western governments that he pardon or commute the sentences of an Egyptian-Canadian journalist and two of his Al-Jazeera colleagues who were all handed heavy prison terms a day earlier in a court ruling that raised international outrage.

El-Sissi's tough stance reflected an image the former army chief has sought to project to the Egyptian public — one of a strong leader defying foreign pressure on Egypt. Nationalist media bolstered that narrative Tuesday, praising the verdicts as a sign of the judiciary standing up to outside interference.

El-Sissi said he would not interfere in court rulings or the judicial process. Legal experts said that doesn't rule out a pardon later after any appeals are exhausted. THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

U.S. company one step closer to space tourism

$75K per person. Flights planned to begin in 2016

An Arizona company said Tuesday it has successfully completed the first small-scale test flight of a high-altitude balloon and capsule being developed to let tourists float 32 kilometres above the earth.

World View Enterprises of Tucson said it launched the flight last week from Roswell, New Mexico.

CEO Jane Poynter said the system broke the world record for highest parafoil flight, lifting a payload to 36,576 metres.

"It went really, really, really well," Poynter said. "Actually, the guys hit the ball out of the park. We're thrilled."

ISES/THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

The system uses a balloon similar to that used in 2012 to lift Austrian daredevil Felix Baumgartner 39,014 metres to make a world-record breaking 38.62-kilometre sky dive. That flight launched from the Roswell airport.

Poynter said that last week's flight was the first testing all the components together. It used a balloon about third the size of that planned for passenger flight to lift a payload of about one-tenth of what will be used to carry passengers.

The company is still planning to begin its $75,000-perperson flights in 2016, she said. The balloons will lift a capsule carrying six passengers and two crew members 32 kilometres up, where they will float under a parafoil for about two hours before floating back down to earth.

Tribute to moms has MacKay in hot water

Mother's, Father's Day messages. Women change diapers and pack lunches, while men shape 'leaders,' minister writes to staff

Justice Minister Peter MacKay raised eyebrows in his department with two very different tributes to female and male employees for Mother's Day and Father's Day this year.

Emails obtained by The Canadian Press show that in May, MacKay saluted mothers in the department for holding down two full-time jobs—at home and at work.

"By the time many of you have arrived at the office in the morning, you've already changed diapers, packed lunches, run after school buses, dropped kids off at daycare, taken care of an aging loved one and maybe even thought about dinner," MacKay said of the moms in a staff-wide memo that went out to thousands of employees before Mother's Day.

The email didn't get much reaction internally until the Father's Day version arrived a month later. It made no mention of any household duties, but said the men were "shaping the minds and futures of the next generation of leaders"

"... Needless to say, it can also be daunting to consider the immense and life-long influence we have over our children," MacKay wrote. "Our words, actions and examples greatly mould who they will become."

The Mother's Day message does not touch on the impact the women have on their children's futures.

MacKay's office did not respond to a request for an interview.

Liberal trade critic Chrystia Freeland calls the difference in the Justice Department email messages striking and says they play on outdated stereotypes of parental roles.

"I think that particularly in families like the ones that were addressed by these emails ... I simply don't think that reflects the modern Canadian family and is demeaning to both mothers and fathers," said Freeland.

Uruguay. Marijuana club takes steps to register officially under national pot legalization law

A group has taken steps to become the first officially recognized marijuana-growing club in Uruguay, where lawmakers have made their country the world's first national marketplace for legal pot.

The Association of Cannabis Studies of Uruguay began the process by registering with the Education and Culture Ministry, Drug Control Chief Julio Calzada said Tuesday.

The club will have 40 members and will be headed by Laura Blanco. She told the Uruguayan newspaper El Pais that members will pay $300 each to join, and a monthly fee of up to $65. Some of the members will use the marijuana to treat medical conditions.

Lawmakers in December approved Uruguay's experiment with marijuana, giving the government the power to oversee production, sales and consumption of a drug illegal almost everywhere else.

Joining a growing club is one of three legal ways to obtain pot under the law.

Licensed buyers will be able to purchase up to 10 grams a week or 40 grams a month from a network of pharmacies that is expected to be functioning by late 2014 or early 2015.

Uruguayan citizens and legal residents 18 or older can also register to obtain licenses giving them the right to cultivate up to six marijuana plants per household and harvest 480 grams a year, or join a marijuana-growing club with between 15 and 45 members and no more than 99 plants.

Illegal logging. It's the most lucrative, bringing in between $30 and $100 billion annually

Environmental crime such as the poaching of elephants for ivory and the selling of illegal charcoal is helping to finance criminal, militia and terrorist groups, said a report from the United Nations Environment Program released Tuesday.

The Somali terror group al-Shabab makes between $38 million and $56 million a year in illegal charcoal, the report

Other militia groups - including the Lord's Resistance Army, which U.S. troops are trying to help hunt down in central Africa - make between $4 million and $12 million a year by trafficking elephant ivory.

The most lucrative environmental crime is illegal logging, which the report said is worth between $30 billion and $100 billion annually.

"This is a big story. It's a sad story. It's threatening communities and international economics despite everything we've put in place at the national and international level, the forces of the market are not allowing us to come to grips with this problem," said Achim Steiner, the head

The magnitude of money lost to national economies "registers on an economic Richter scale" and requires a more systemic response because of the transnational nature of the threat, Steiner

Tuesday's report was re-

John Scanlon, the secretary general of CITES, the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species, said experts believe that speculators are stockpiling ivory in the belief that elephants will one day become extinct and the price of ivory will rise.

Poachers have killed tens of thousands of elephants across Africa in recent years, a trend that experts say will lead to extinction if the killings are not stopped.

"There has been a clear change in the nature of wildlife crime in the last three, four, five years. It's happening on an industrial scale now, Scanlon said.

Social media. Businesses prove to be a bit socially awkward on the Internet

Canadian businesses are becoming increasingly active on mediums such as LinkedIn and Twitter, but too many remain socially awkward, and it's hurting their bottom line.

"Companies are starting to engage in an authentic way with Canadians and that's leading to increased sales, increased customer service satisfaction and a sense of connectedness,' said Ian Capstick, managing partner at Ottawa-based consulting firm MediaStyle.

"But, let's be honest, not all Canadian companies are quite there yet. You can still find lots of dormant Twitter accounts, websites that aren't updated, store hours on a door front, for instance, that don't match the digital store hours or the ones on Google.'

While many businesses may think they're interacting with their customers on social media because they have a Twitter account or Facebook page, experts agree a more strategic plan is needed to really leverage the many available platforms and give companies a proper return on investment.

"People need to tie their

INSUFFERABILITY EMISSIONS DOWN

Good news!

The Global Insufferability Index (GII) is down slightly today.

For those of you not familiar with the GII, it's the measure of the amount of holier-thanthou self-righteousness in the atmosphere, and it experienced a sharp drop when we learned about the Greenpeace executive who commuted by air between Luxembourg where he lives and Amsterdam where he works, 400 kilometres one way.

As a result of his commute, Pascal Husting, the environmental organization's international program director, personally has been responsible for dumping 7.4 tonnes of carbon dioxide into the atmosphere over the last two

This comes from an organization that says: "In terms of damage to the climate, flying is 10 times worse than taking the train." But Husting didn't want to endure the 12-hour re-

As you might imagine, his colleagues are gasping a bit for air. All over the planet, Greenpeace faces are red.

In his blog, the executive director of Greenpeace UK asks the question: "What kind of compromises do you make in your efforts to try to make the world a better place?"

And then, without waiting for an answer he may not like, he answers his own question: "For what it's worth, I don't think we've crossed the line here at Greenpeace.

Of course, that doesn't clear the air for all those Greenpeace volunteers who have made the hard choices and now find themselves underwriting airline travel for their trusty stewards of the environment. One guy, who has volunteered since the '80s, calls the situation "unbelievable.' So now they know what it's like for the rest of us: It ain't easy being green. If they were really honest, the rainbow warriors of Greenpeace would add up ALL of their carbonemitting activities. And then stay home, which is probably the greenest thing they could do.

As much as there's a temptation to gloat, we have to be careful about the GII. And we don't want to discourage all those people who are trying to save the planet. We just want them to ask: Are we part of the solution...or part of the prob-

Other organizations are quietly doing their best to put environmental standards in places that don't require a circus act — in construction, waste management, transportation, the food industry, etc. They don't make headlines, but they do make it possible for 7.2 billion people to make it through another day on earth.

Global warming is one of the great challenges of the age. But it's not the only one. Insufferability is right up there.

Greenpeace, at least, will be a little more down to earth literally. Starting next week, Greenpeace has announced, Pascal Husting will start taking the train.

Bay-ing for Transformers

Blowed-up-real-good box-office bonanza.

Critics may hate Michael Bay's schtick, but his flicks are hits

IN FOCUS Richard Crouse scene@metronews.ca

Director Michael Bay once said he doesn't make movies for critics. The auteur behind such hits as The Rock, Armageddon, Bad Boys 1 and 2 and the Transformers movies is best known for making big, loud films that rake it in at the box office but leave critics reaching for the Advil Bay acknowledged the adversarial relationship in a 2005 article by Rene Rodriguez.

"They castrate me," he told Rodriguez. "They call me the devil and all that crap."

It's not hard to see why reviewers have a hard time with his films. He never met a building or car or city he didn't want to blow up in spectacular fashion, and critics often feel like they have to slather on SPF 70 to avoid getting a tan from the glare off the giant fireballs that light up screen in Bay's films.

Audiences, however, have flocked to his flicks. According to boxofficemojo.com his 10 features have grossed close to $2 billion. That's a lot of beans.

The release this weekend of Transformers: Age of Extinction promises to add to those totals. The fourth installment of the franchise stars Mark Wahlberg as a single father and struggling inventor who discovers the deactivated Autobots leader Optimus Prime.

The movie promises a whole new raft of Transformers, including bounty hunter Lockdown and the rough and tumble Dinobot Grimlock. Bay promises we'll also see an "angry Optimus Prime."

Will the critics like Age of Extinction? Who knows.

The Transformers movies are as close to guaranteed hits as Hollywood has these days, so reviews most likely won't matter to the box office.

Not all of Bay's films have been critically reviled.

"The critics were very nice to me when I first began with Bad Boys," he says and his last movie, the crime drama Pain and Gain, was called "the best movie Michael Bay's ever made," by the Newark Star-Ledger.

That film has a few things

Stars feel the heat of real explosions

"We were happy to do whatever was asked of us whenever it was asked of us," says Transformers: Age of Extinction star Jack Reynor.

The Colorado-born, Irishraised actor proved he was game for anything when he was given just 20 minutes to prepare for a wild scene that brought him face-to-face with real explosions.

"It is an incredibly intimidating experience in many ways," he said, "but at the end of the day you have to trust the people around you, that they know what they're doing that they're prepared, and that you're safe. We had a great stunt team who worked on this film with us. Those guys really put us at ease." Sharing the explosive

GOT. Here's the one ruler who doesn't want Westeros

For Queen Elizabeth II, one throne is enough.

The United Kingdom's 88-year-old monarch toured the Belfast sets of the hit HBO series Game of Thrones and met many of its stars Tuesday beside the show's sword-covered seat of power, the Iron Throne.

Unlike many visitors to Belfast's Titanic Studios, the monarch declined to try out the throne created for the ruler of the mythical Seven Kingdoms and legendarily forged from a thousand swords. Instead, she received a miniature model as a gift.

Game of Thrones creators David Benioff and Dan Weiss escorted the monarch through the show's armoury, costume design and storage, and sprawling sets used to shoot the program's interior scenes and perilous ice-cliff ascents — all part of the biggest TV production ever mounted in Europe.

The real-life head of the House of Windsor talked with actors from the show's rival royal houses, the Lannisters and the Starks.

Big Lebowski. Turturro is interested in reprising his nemesis role in cult classic

Actor and director John Turturro, who played bowling league nemesis Jesus Quintana in The Big Lebowski,"told a film festival audience that he would be interested in revisiting the character in 2015.

"If I can get the permission I need, I'd like to return to that role," he told a master class audience at the Taormina Film Festival in Sicily, Italy, on Saturday, according to The Hollywood Reporter.

The rival bowler, a thin, flamboyant, intense competitor clad in purple, opposes the laidback jeff Lebowski slacker icon "The Dude" and his bowling team during a local tournament.

Limited screen-time during the 1998 Coen brothers movie did not prevent Jesus Quintana from becoming a cult character.

Though this is not the first time that Turturro has expressed interest in returning to the part, a 2015 date insinuates that his speculated spinoff is nearing realization. AFP

Ioan Rivers takes a swipe at K. Stew in new book

MELINDA TAUB

Kristen Stewart doesn't take kindly to the implication that she sleeps around to get roles: She's threatened to sue Joan Rivers if she sees it in Rivers' new book, Diary of a Mad Diva, includes a pointed crack about the Twilight actress. "Many stars only do one thing well. The best one-trick pony is Kristen Stewart, who got a whole career by being able to juggle a director's b-s," Rivers wrote. All the world knows that Stewart did cheat on thenboyfriend Robert Pattinson with director Rupert Sanders, but it would be a stretch to say that doing so gave her a career — Sanders directed her in Snow White and the Huntsman, not, you know, one of those little vampire movies she did.

Plus, Stewart's had a thriving career since she was a teen, which makes the allegation even more unsavoury.

Stewart dispatched a lawyer to make these points to Rivers' people, according to Page Six. It sounds unlikely that Rivers will apologize or revise, however. The book's prologue reads: "Anyone who takes anything in this book seriously is an idiot.

Which is probably the closest Joan Rivers gets to issuing an apology.

Coming up the Causeway

Northern Ireland. If

you're in the mood for wondrous scenery and a little bit of whiskey, try striking out on the Causeway Coastal Route this summer

ANDREW JOHN VIRTUE DOBSON dobbernationloves.com

Northern Ireland's famed Causeway Coastal Route is rated as one of the world's great road journeys. This past May it was in the international spotlight as the scenic backdrop to the Giro d'Italia's Big Start cycle race, which was watched by over 775 million people around the world.

The 200 kilometres of stunning coastline offers twists and turns that reveal windswept cliffs, ancient cathedrals, crumbling castles, quaint farms, villages and unspoiled beaches. Here are four attractions along the Causeway Coast:

Titanic Belfast

Perhaps the most famous vessel ever launched, RMS Titanic was built in Belfast's Harland & Wolff shipyard for White Star Line. When her keel was laid in 1909, Belfast was at the height of its fame as a shipbuilding powerhouse. Today Belfast's star attraction is Titanic Belfast, a world-class museum which sits where the original ship was constructed. The six-floor building features nine interactive galleries that explore the Titanic.

The Carrick-a-Rede Rope Bridge

This bridge is a 20 metre-long, one metre-wide bridge of wire rope that spans the chasm between sea cliffs and the island of Carrick-a-Rede. It sways gently, 30 metres above rock-strewn water. The island has sustained a salmon fishery for centuries; fishermen stretch nets out from the tip of the island to intercept salmon migrating to their home rivers.

Giant's Causeway

When you first see it, you'll understand why the ancients believed the Giant's Causeway was not a natural feature. The vast expanse of closely packed, hexagonal stone columns dipping gently beneath the waves looks like the handiwork of giants. This spectacular rock formation is Northern Ireland's only UNESCO World Heritage Site, and is one of the Emerald Isle's most impressive and atmospheric features.

Bushmills

The small town of Bushmills has long been a pilgrimage for connoisseurs of Irish whiskey, and for good reason: The Old Bushmills Distillery is the world's oldest, granted a licence by King James I in 1608.

Tours offer guests an indepth look into Bushmills' history and the production of its world renowned whiskey. Friendly guides take guests through the property, making stops at the production facility, barrel aging hanger, whimsical bottling plant and tasting room.

Quintessentially Canadian road trips

Just drive. Celebrate living in one of the greatest countries in the world with some serious Sunday drives

life@metronews.ca

There's nothing quite as much fun as hitting the highway in the middle of summer. With car windows rolled down, Canada has some of the most remarkable road trips on the planet.

Whether you have days to spend (or just a few hours), treat yourself to some freeway freedom this summer by taking one of these three journeys.

The Sea-to-Sky Highway Vancouver to Whistler, B.C.

Approximately a two-hour drive from Vancouver to Whistler, Highway 99 provides breathtaking seaside vistas and stunning waterfalls as it winds through the Coast Mountains.

Easily one of the most gorgeous drives in Canada, it also celebrates the area's First Nations history with many interpretive kiosks along the way — as well as the fascinating Britannia Mine Museum, where visitors can travel deep into what was once the Commonwealth's largest copper mine.

If You're Hungry: Stop at The Watershed Grill in Shannon Falls and grab a seat on the patio overlooking the peaceful Squamish River.

Cabot Trail Cape Breton, N.S.

A curvy, two-lane blacktop that circles Cape Breton Island, Cabot Trail may be a four-hour drive from Halifax, but it's worth the venture.

Start at the southern tip in Baddeck where Alexander Graham Bell lived. After a visit to the telephone inventor's national historical site, head north to enjoy amazing views from the rocky cliffs overlooking the Atlantic Ocean.

As you circle the route, take in sandy beaches and whale watching in Ingonish and enjoy the French spoken in the Acadian capital of Cheticamp.

If You're Hungry: Be sure to savour freshly caught, handgathered Asby Bay oysters at Hideaway Campground and Oyster Market at the top of the Cabot Trail.

The Rocky Mountains Banff to Jasper, Alta.

There's almost no imperfect route through the Rockies. However, for first-timers, begin in Banff (90 minutes from Calgary) where you can bask in the beauty of Canada's first national park and hot springs before heading north through the stunning, mountainous Icefields Parkway to Jasper.

Besides magnificent mountainous scenery, look for wildlife including bears and elk, explore historical buildings or simply hike.

Make time to discover Lake Louise, where visitors are rewarded by a graceful glacial basin below the towering peaks.

If You're Hungry: Try the deli (or make dinner reservations) at popular Sunwapta Falls Lodge, where you can dine and enjoy the panoramic views along the Icefields Parkway.

Chicken shares the grill with veg

Barbecue Chicken Salad. This outdoor dinner is perfect for those nights when you want to pass on those pesky carbs

DINNER FXPRFSS

Get your grill on and create a delicious dinner salad using chicken and vegetables.

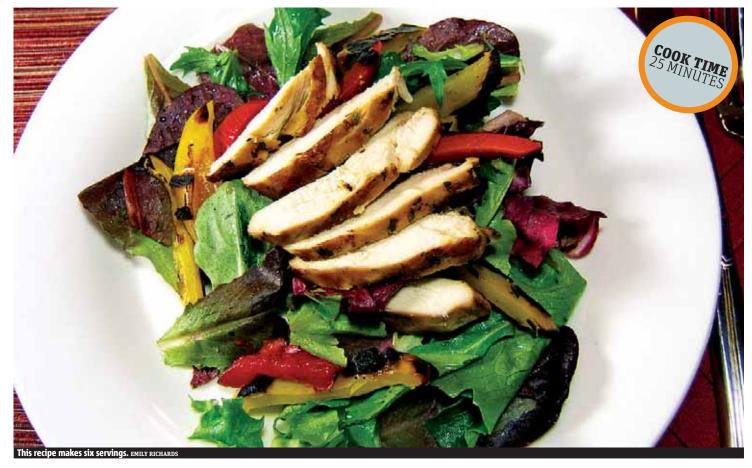

With a smokey taste, grilling not only adds great flavour, but also texture to your vegetables.

I like marinating the chicken in the morning so that when I get home I can put everything on the grill for a weeknight meal that is fast and flavourful.

Not to worry if you can't wake up early; you can marinate it the night before.

If you have a chance to slice up your vegetables the night

- 2 tbsp (30 ml) sodium-reduced sov sauce
- 2 tbsp (30 ml) chopped cilantro
- 1 tbsp (15 ml) canola oil • 1 tbsp (15 ml) minced fresh
- ginger
- 2 cloves garlic, minced
- 1/4 tsp (1 ml) Asian garlic chili paste or hot pepper flakes
- 4 boneless skinless chicken breasts (about 600 g total) • 2 each red and yellow bell pep-
- 8 cups (2 l) spring greens
- 3 tbsp (45 ml) rice vinegar

before, too, you'll save time.

Not having the right ingredients can make dinner difficult. But for this recipe, it's easy enough to pick up what you need fresh on your way home while some pantry staples are used to complete

1. In large bowl, whisk together the soy sauce, cilantro, half of the canola oil, ginger, garlic and chili paste. Add chicken breasts and toss to coat well. Cover and refrigerate for at least 30 minutes or up to 1 day.

2. Meanwhile, cut peppers into quarters. Place on greased grill over medium-high heat. Grill for about 10 minutes turning often or until starting to become golden and tender crisp. Remove to plate.

3. Place chicken breasts on medium-high greased grill and grill for about 12 minutes, turning once or until no longer pink inside. Remove to 4. Chop grilled peppers into bite-size pieces. In large bowl, toss peppers with spring greens, remaining oil and vinegar. Slice chicken and serve on top of salad.

- Grill the chicken and peppers and keep refrigerated for up to 2 days to make the salad later in the week.
- Roasting Option: You can roast the peppers and chicken. Place vegetables on parchment paper lined baking sheet and roast in 425F (220 C) oven for about 10 minutes. Add chicken breasts and roast for another 20 minutes or until chicken is no longer pink inside and peppers are

Oilers get another top-10 draft pick

Building voung core.

Edmonton is not going for a specific position

The Edmonton Oilers have another top-10 draft pick and with that comes another chance to build around its young core.

The Oilers have the third selection in Friday night's first round, a year after taking Darnell Nurse seventh and two years removed from a streak of three consecutive No. 1 picks. But even with forwards Nail Yakupov (2012), Ryan Nugent-Hopkins (2011), Taylor Hall (2010) and Jordan Eberle (23rd in 2008) in the fold, Edmonton isn't in a position to be position specific.

"You're just trying to get the best available player you can," head amateur scout Stu MacGregor said in a phone interview. "And if you end up with too many of one kind of player, it would then be up to management to trade whichever asset you have to attain something else at a different position."

General manager Craig MacTavish has made no secret of his desire to acquire a puck-moving defenceman this off-season, which isn't exactly a unique need in today's NHL. The No. 3 pick isn't likely the place do that, unless it becomes a trade chip.

The Oilers hosted defenceman Aaron Ekblad, centres Sam Bennett and Sam Reinhart and multi-purpose forward Leon Draisaitl recently, MacTavish said in a radio appearance on AM-630 in Edmonton. Two of those players are sure to be available third overall, though Ekblad — a pro-ready two-way defenceman — is considered the likely No. 1 pick to Florida or whichever team trades for it.

With Hall and Eberle taking up top-six wing spots, there could be room for Bennett or Reinhart behind Nugent-Hopkins. MacTavish wants to fill in this top three lines so that grinders like Matt Hendricks and Boyd Gordon can slide down the lineup.

NHL Central Scouting director Dan Marr said during the scouting combine that he sees this draft as being full of players to stock the bottom half of teams' rosters. The top-end talent is limited, but Marr thinks there are plenty of prospects with long-term staying power as role players.

Italy out. Uruguay's Suarez apparently caught biting yet again

After nearly two weeks of mostly beautiful, free-flowing football, the game's ugly side was on full display when Uruguay edged 10-man Italy 1-0 on Tuesday to reach the second round of the World Cup.

With a bite on the shoulder, a shin to the head and a boot to the knee, there wasn't much to admire at the Arena das Dunas. Even the match's lone goal was a product of brute force — it didn't even come with a kick or a header.

Uruguay defender Diego Godin scored with his shoulder in the 81st minute of an "in or out" match to send his side through to the second round, but the victory was overshadowed by a biting incident involving the South American squad's star forward Luis Suarez.

And with four-time champion Italy heading home after the group phase for a second time in four years, coach Cesare Prandelli and football federation president Giancarlo Abete both resigned moments after the match.

"When you don't score a goal in two matches and don't create much, it's clearly a failure," Italy captain Gianluigi Buffon said, with the Azzurri having also been beaten 1-0 by Costa Rica in their previous

- Engines (hp). 2.4-litre four-cylinder with direct gasoline injection (182)
- Transmission. Six-speed automatic
- Base price.$33,599 (plus destination fee)

Market position

The Tucson offers a variety of choices, including two engines, front- or all-wheel drive, and even a manual transmission on its base trim level, along with numerous premium features on the top-line

Points

- New for 2014, both engines feature direct gasoline injection, formerly found on more expensive cars. This lets engineers tweak the engines for more power and better fuel economy.
- The GLS and Limited trims come with a panoramic sunroof, which adds to the cabin's roomy feel.
- The shock absorbers automatically adjust to road con-

If a car and an SUV had a love child

Review. The Hyundai Tucson Limited offers all-wheel drive, tons of legroom and driverselectable steering

MCINTOSH

The compact SUV segment is one of the most popular in Canada, and it's easy to see why. These are vehicles that combine car-like driving characteristics with SUV-style practicality, and in many cases, all-wheel drive capability. Hyundai bundles all of that together in its Tucson.

Three trim lines are available, starting at $21,499 for the GL, with a 164-horsepower, 2.0-litre four-cylinder engine and front-wheel drive. Next up is the mid-range GLS, which uses a 2.4-litre four-cylinder making 182 horsepower. My tester, the top-line Limited, exclusively combines the 2.4-litre with all-wheel drive.

It's priced at $33,599 and includes such Limited-only features as dual-zone automatic climate control, premium stereo, navigation, and leather off-roading, but for improved traction. The all-wheel Tucson primarily runs in front-wheel, but sends power to the rear tires when it senses slippage. For muddy or snowy driveways, you can lock it into four-wheel at low speeds.

Its AWD isn't meant for

Also included on the Limited is driver-selectable steering, which lets you adjust the steering feel to normal, comfort, or sport. I find it more of a gimmick than anything, and all but the sport are too light and vague for my liking.

The Tucson's handsome, especially with its new headlamps and, on the Limited, its LED taillights. However, while the side windows come to a stylish point at the rear, they do cut down on visibility. The seats are supportive, and while all Tucson models have heated front chairs, the GLS and Limited have heated rear ones, too. Rear legroom is good, and while the rear seats don't fold completely flat, they're easy to operate when you need to increase the cargo area.

Overall, the Tucson rides and handles well, it's roomy inside, and it comes with a long warranty. I found the Limited a little pricey and would probably opt for the mid-range GLS, but check out the features and test-drive both of them if a compact SUV is in your future.

Antiheroes on television often drive cars that reveal character truths and act as an extension of their core values. Spies tend to want to drive nondescript vehicles so they blend into their surroundings. The bland 1977 Oldsmobile Delta, seemingly straight out of the KGB motor pool, that we typically see Philip and Elizabeth (Keri Russell) in while stalking the streets of suburban D.C. certainly fit the bill. But on Season 2's "New Car" episode, comrade Philip is overcome by his

Dexter Morgan

Dexter 2008 Ford Escape Hybrid SUV

Who knew serial killers and soccer moms had automotive tastes in common? The 2008 Ford Escape Hybrid SUV has an efficient gasoline engine complemented by a pair of electric motors so it runs very clean, just like Dexter leaves his crime scenes. Appeasing his "Dark Passenger," the roomy trunk can fit plenty of plastic

When your best friend overdoses on cocaine and you were always coveting his flame-painted lifted Dodge pickup, the move is to fish out his keys and just tell his family you bought an identical one. You see, a Dodge pickup with some aftermarket aggro-edge is a white-trash hero's dream machine. While his previous rides have included a three-wheeled motorcycle, Yukon Denali, and a lime-green Dodge Viper, this take-no-prisoners bad boy best encapsulates Powers' boorish mystique.

But the Mickey Rourke of SUVs was genius car casting for Breaking Bad. This was, after all, a car that foreshadowed Detroit's dark slide into the abyss. One of the two models actually used in the show sold for $110,000 at an auction in Vegas last year. The late James Gandolfini autographed the driver's side sun visor and added the message: "Be Nice to My Car." Later in the series Tony upgraded to a Cadillac Escalade ESV, a more modern Mafioso vehicle.

This scraggly looking shrub is a rubber resource

Guayule. A consortium is looking into this desert plant as an alternative to the rubber tree as demand for natural rubber grows

If this scraggy shrub was growing on your property, chances are you'd be looking to eradicate it with a big weed whacker.

Not only is it not pretty, but it's got a name that gives your mouth a cardiovascular and flexibility workout: guayule, pronounced "gwah-yoo-lee."

But this shrub, which grows wild in the desert, produces rubber.

The world's demand for natural rubber is increasing, and many are concerned that the rubber tree (a.k.a. the Hevea tree) won't be able to keep up. It's only grown in a relatively thin strip around the equator in jungle-like locations that are not fun for workers, and where landowners have more lucrative crop options (some legal, some not so much). On top of that, it takes seven years before you can harvest rubber from a rubber

So a consortium — led by Cooper Tires and which includes Arizona State University — has a $6.9-million grant from the U.S. government to look into the possibility of large-scale growth and production of guayule-based natural Arizona State is looking at the entire social and environmental impact of turning desert into guayule farmland.

"Theoretically you could have a product on the market that uses some quayule rubber in five to 10 years."

Chuck Yurkovich, Cooper Tires

We could just use more synthetic rubber, sourced from petrochemicals, but that's not ideal, and natural rubber is a very unique product.

Even with all their laboratories and white coats, tire scientists still prefer to use natural rubber in tires.

"Natural rubber is the closest thing to the perfect elastomer. If I could only use one elastromer in a tire, I would chose natural rubber," says Cooper Tire research scientist Howard Colvin, from the company's headquarters in Findlay, Ohio.

Colvin says natural rubber has lots of beneficial properties, but among the most prized is its ability to self-heal.

"When you get a small crack in the rubber compound, the crack stops immediately. In synthetics that is not the case. This is especially important in a sidewall, where you have a lot of flexing going

Natural rubber stays "cooler" than synthetic rubbers.

According to Colvin, the rubber fibres sourced from guayule are remarkably similar to fibres sourced from Hevea, except that guayule, "smells a lot better ... fresher ... a bit like

Guayule can be harvested every 18 months, and harvesting nets useful byproducts, such as resins and biomass that can be processed into fuel.

Many tire makers, including Cooper, are also looking into Russian dandelionsourced rubber; its main byproduct is sugars.

Colvin's colleague, Chuck Yurkovich, Cooper's vicepresident of global technology, personally feels that guayule is closer to being a realist rubber resource than Russian dandelion. How close?

"We're at the point where we are building and testing tires. But a lot also depends on the success of the agronomic part of the equation. Then there would be manufacturing capabilities to be built up. But theoretically you could have a product on the market that uses some guayule rubber in five to 10 years. A lot depends on what happens in the next 12 to 18 months.'

T Aries

March 21 - April 20

Sometimes it is best to leave things to fate and as you are under divine protection at the moment nothing and no one can hurt you. Not that anyone in their right mind would want to try it anyway.

Taurus April 21 - May 21

It annoys you when others drag their feet but there is no point losing your temper if a loved one takes too much time to do something today. Do whatever it takes to hold in that scream.

II Gemini May 22 - June 21

You may be tempted to take what you want today, simply because you know that you can, but maybe you should look a little further ahead and think how it may affect a relationship.

9 Cancer June 22 - July 23

There may be times over the next 24 hours when it feels as if you are the only one who does not know what is going on, but is that such a bad thing? Being out of the loop could actually work in your favour today.

$\Omega$ Leo July 24 - Aug. 23

Let others know what you intend to do and invite them to join in if they have something to offer. This is a great day for strengthening bonds that may have come a bit loose of late.

W Virgo Aug. 24 - Sept. 23

There is nothing wrong with having power but if you've got it you must make sure you use it in the right way. Bear that thought in mind today. Don't use power to take what you are not really entitled to.

△ Libra

Sept. 24 - Oct. 23

Mars in your sign makes you believe you can do anything you choose but other aspects warn if you act without thinking today you could end up a loser. Stay on the good side of people in positions of power.

M Scorpio Oct. 24 - Nov. 22

Someone will pull rank on you today but don't get uptight about it because there is nothing you can do to change things. Keep your thoughts and feelings to yourself.

プ Sagittarius Nov. 23 - Dec. 21

You may have to twist a few arms to get what you want today but it won't be too difficult, in fact you will enjoy playing the tough guy.

り Capricorn Dec. 22 - Jan. 20

The planets warn if you don't make a decision soon about a career matter it will be taken out of your hands. Don't get too hung up on available choices. Whatever you go for will work out well for you.

⋄ Aquarius Jan. 21 - Feb. 19

Someone you meet on your travels will become very important to you in the weeks and months to come. You will be on exactly the same wavelength mentally and emotionally — and there is the chance romance could blossom.

H Pisces

Feb. 20 - March 20

Sometimes it is better to back off from a fight and with Mars opposing Uranus today this is one of them. Let others argue. Your talents are better suited to loving. SALLY BROMPTON
